SUMMARY

BACKGROUND. Since World War II, the U.S. Military Services and counterpart Services of friendly foreign governments have entered into agreements establishing military personnel exchange programs. In accordance with these agreements, each party provides for the reciprocal assignment of military personnel to substantially equivalent positions within the defense establishment of the other participating government. Similar agreements have been concluded for the exchange of civilian personnel in particular fields of expertise, such as scientists, engineers, and intelligence analysts. The Office of the Secretary of Defense staff elements and Defense Agencies also participate in these programs. These personnel exchange programs are designed to foster mutual understanding between governments, by providing exchange personnel familiarity with the organization, administration, and operations of the other. All such personnel exchange programs established by the DoD Components constitute the Defense Personnel Exchange Program.

REPORTING REQUIREMENT. The 1997 Defense Authorization Bill (Public Law 104-201, Section 1082) defines the Defense Personnel Exchange Program and requires the negotiation of an international agreement for personnel exchanges. In accordance with Senate Committee Report 104-267, dated May 13, 1996, the Secretary of Defense also is directed to report to the Congress annually on the costs of this Program to the United States, to identify the appropriation that funded those costs, and to identify the agencies and positions that are involved in each exchange program, both within the United States and in other countries. The costs include those costs allocated for the management and implementation of each program.

The Defense Department spent $2,002,821 during Fiscal Year 1996 on the four types of exchanges: Military Personnel Exchange Program (MPEP), Engineer and Scientist Exchange Program (ESEP), Defense Intelligence Personnel Exchange Program (DIPEP), and Administrative and Professional (A&P) Exchange Program.
